

ARIZONA STATE SENATE
Forty-ninth Legislature, First Regular Session

PROGRAM PRESENTATION
Temporary Assistance for Needy Families

Background

The Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act (PRWORA) of 1996 (PL 104-193) reformed the welfare system in the United States. PRWORA combined federal funding for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Job Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) and Emergency Assistance programs into a single block grant titled Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF). Elements of PRWORA include a focus on family self-sufficiency through employment, flexibility for states to design their own programs and replacement of open-ended entitlements with capped block grants subject to state legislative appropriations.

States may use TANF funds in any manner “reasonably calculated to accomplish the purposes of TANF,” which are to: 1) provide assistance to needy families so that children may be cared for in their own homes or in the homes of relatives; 2) end the dependence of needy parents on government benefits by promoting job preparation, work and marriage; 3) prevent and reduce the incidence of out-of-wedlock pregnancies and establish annual numerical goals for preventing and reducing the incidence of these pregnancies; and 4) encourage the formation and maintenance of two-parent families. Under TANF expenditure requirements, states must require work participation, set time limits for assistance, improve child support enforcement, encourage parental responsibility and collect data on performance outcomes. States may receive financial bonuses for success in achieving goals, and financial penalties are imposed if requirements are not met. States are also required to maintain a specified level of funding, known as “maintenance of effort.”

The TANF block grant and expenditure requirements were authorized and funded for federal fiscal years 1998-2002, with reauthorization anticipated in five-year increments. From 2002 to 2006, TANF operated under a series of continuing resolutions and extensions. In February 2006, TANF was reauthorized for five years under the federal Deficit Reduction Act of 2005.

Fiscal Information

According to the Joint Legislative Budget Committee (JLBC), TANF base revenues for FY 2008-2009 total $226,630,500. In FY 2008-2009, the Department of Economic Security (DES) received additional funding from the federal TANF Contingency Fund, which is a reserve fund set aside for states with rising costs in TANF-related programs. Because of rising Food Stamps cases, DES received $40,000,000 in FY 2008-2009. Combined with a beginning balance of $14,354,900, TANF revenues in FY 2008-2009 total $280,985,400. The FY 2008-2009 budget provides $281,716,100 of the state’s federal TANF Block Grant allocation. However, the actual ending balance cannot be negative; the agency will employ funding options to balance the appropriation for FY 2008-2009.

Arizona uses TANF monies for multiple programs, including cash assistance, programs for hunger and homelessness, domestic violence prevention, adoption services, foster care, child protective services programs, child care assistance and employment services. The attached table provides detailed information on TANF expenditures and appropriations.
